

Jack Morgan

Jack Morgan is a child of Mississippi, a graduate of Texas, and a Covid-era product of Harvard's low residency master's degree in Creative Writing and Literature. He paddles outrigger canoe, takes long walks, keeps an aquarium of poisonous sea urchins, and meets as many tourists as he can.

His first novel, The Quiet of the Pines, is a work in progress. He is published in Brattle Street Review and writes an irregular column for Story Street Writers. His novella, Book of Adam, Gospel of Eve is enshrouded in dust, buried deep in the stacks of Harvard's Frances Loeb Library and was completed under the guidance of Dr. Elisabeth Sharp McKetta.

Jack lives in Honolulu with his partner, the writer Staci Stokes Morgan, and their herd of small dogs.
